Throwing the Bolt: A World War 2 memoir By Stuart Symington Jr

Stuart Symington is one of the fast-diminishing number of veterans of service in the U.S. military in World War 2, which began over seventy years ago. Toward the end of the war, he served overseas as an Army Engineer in the European and Pacific Theaters of Operation. In this memoir, he recalls the mundane and occasionally bizarre experiences of an enlisted man at the lowest rung of the ladder of military responsibility. He supplements his narrative with evocative short stories, and the recollections of fellow veterans. Through telling it like it was, he hopes to add to popular understanding of just what it was like to be one of the unsung millions of Americans who served their country during the war. Grateful to have survived himself, he offers this memoir as homage to the memory of those who did not return, and their families.
