Death By Drowning 2 (Josiah Reynolds Mysteries) By Abigail Keam

In spite of having to recover from serious injuries from her fall down a cliff with O'nan, Josiah Reynolds is back to sleuthing. This time her friend, Irene Meckler, asks Josiah to investigate the death of her nephew which was ruled accidental. Irene has her doubts.

Along with her best friend Matt and Jake Dosh, a physician assistant hired by Josiah's daughter, Josiah again makes the rounds of quirky characters that can only be found in the mysterious world of ante-bellum homes, bourbon, and horse racing of Kentucky's Bluegrass region.

Will Josiah discover the real reason for the death of her friend's nephew? As Josiah fights for her recovery, she fights for the truth regarding a youth and the secret as how he died. In a land where secrets are buried deep in the earth, Josiah searches in a land that doesn't let go of its past easily. The past never dies in Kentucky - the dark and bloody ground.

From the Author

I tried to be very true to Kentucky in description of its culture, dialogue and people. The language in the Bluegrass is a mixture of "mountain talk" which is similar to Old English blending with a more southern dialect. Kentucky is a border state, which has a culture unique to those states of the Old and Deep South. The people have a certain twang to their vowels and pattern of speech. I can recognize anyone from Kentucky as soon as they speak.

It is still very common for educated folks to use 19th century phrases and styling to express themselves.

"He commenced to hit on me."

"Where you at?"

"Much obliged."

"God bless her - she's as dumb as a fence post."

"Thank you kindly."
